KEYMACRO is a native keyboard macro utility for Linux operating systems that enables users to automatically apply keyboard macros to several keyboard combinations. The main feature that makes this utility so useful is the support for the modifier keys in a keyboard combination (e.g. Ctrl key, Alt key, and Windows key), which means that people will be able to create and apply keyboard macros for multiple combinations that comprise different modifier keys and command keys. As an example, they can set the Ctrl and Alt keys to automatically perform a command that is typed by a certain key (e.g. Caps lock) by using this software. KEYMACRO is very simple to use and it supports a wizard-style setup that will guide users in its installation process. Furthermore, it will save the user's choice for the keyboard combinations that will be used in a macro and will also log keyboard activity in order to keep track of those commands. Important! KEYMACRO is a free desktop application, however, it requires a Windows operating system in order to be installed and run. It will be installed alongside the Microsoft Keyboard and Mouse Driver (Win32) and will display a notification on the screen when it has been successfully installed. Keyboard macro software that provides users with the option of creating complex macros. Those who use several keyboard combinations for performing various tasks will benefit from this keyboard macro software. Keymacro will automatically apply the macro commands for the key combination that is typed by users, and will also log the executed keyboard commands to keep a track of the typed commands. This keyboard macro software offers users a number of interesting features: MODIFIER KEY support, which will allow users to set the modifier keys in their keyboard combinations; Windows key support, which will allow users to define keyboard macros that will be performed with the Caps lock key as the modifier key; Highly customizable keyboard macros, which will allow users to define their own macros and to create complex macros that will combine multiple keys into one or more macros; Sound macros, which will allow users to easily create keyboard macros that will be played whenever the Caps lock key is pressed; CUSTOMIZABLE BATCH LIST OF KEYBINDINGS support, which will allow users to define their own list of binding keys and macros, and to allow them to apply the macros to multiple combinations; User-friendly graphical interface that will facilitate the creation and editing of macros; Supports keybinding files, which will enable users to set custom keybindings and to 1d6a3396d6

Sound Valley is an application that was developed to allow users to create a natural ambient by composing and playing the sounds of nature, especially in parks and gardens. We are opening this app under a free trial license for 7 days. Any issues please contact me. Sound Valley is a relatively minimalist application, with a simple, dedicated interface that will improve the user experience. The predefined nature scene library will enable users to compose their own tracks and save them to create their own relaxing ambient on their PCs. Additionally, users will be able to select the tracks to be played on the basis of their personal preferences. Sizing of the library When people refer to the library of nature scenes, we mean a simple library with preset tracks, which is quite a bit limited compared to that of some software such as CSound or Simpler. However, we were able to provide a selection of sound effects with 4 play modes and it allows users to create their own scene composition. One can configure the library with the desired number of tracks and the main menu offers quick access to all the predefined sounds. One will find a list of all the tracks and a preview section, which enables people to view the characteristics of the sound samples included. In addition, one can find an automatic playlist manager and an automatic update system that will help users to keep their sound library up to date. Composing natural ambients with Sound Valley Sound Valley doesn't only offer a player and a composer module, but it will also provide some tools that allow users to be creative. The application offers an automatic song generator that will allow users to create their own nature sounds tracks, such as a relaxing ambience or the sounds of a park. The scene composer will enable people to compose their own scenes with the inbuilt library of sounds and users will be able to set their own track length and volume. Also, they will be able to define whether or not the scene should be played on the basis of a time schedule or on the basis of a users' personal schedule. Sound Valley offers a predefined library of nature scene sounds that will increase users' creativity and allow them to compose their own relaxing sound ambience. The automatic playlist manager will make it easy for people to create their own playlist and they will also be able to create a schedule. Contact Injection Electrochemistry at Gold Surfaces. In this study, we show that contact injection electrochemistry can be performed at gold surfaces in contact with electrolytes. The electrochemical behavior of a ferrocene (Fc) and ferrocenylmethyl (Fcm) carboxylic acid are first examined by means of cyclic voltammetry and faradic stripping analysis in PBS (pH 7.2), aqueous phosphate buffer, and aqueous phosphate buffer with concentrated NaOH or NaCl. A positive shift of the Fc/Fcm peak potential is observed in PBS, but no shift is observed in aqueous phosphate buffer or aqueous phosphate buffer with concentrated NaOH or NaCl. Then, contact injection of Fc and Fcm at a gold surface is performed by using a microjunction electrochemical cell. The faradic current can be quantified and corresponds to a reaction rate of 1.6×10^{-9} cm²/s for Fc and 4.0×10^{-9} cm²/s for Fcm at the gold surface. These results are in good agreement with the values obtained by using a noninjecting method (e.g., bulk solution injection). The relevance of this result for gold surface modification (SAMs
