A: Since this is the first time this occurred I am not sure where to start. This looks like a lot of things. First, do you have any plugins installed? It's possible that you have more than one soundbank active and you are only able to see the sounds from one of them. Then check the settings in your music editor. There is a setting there to choose between the different soundbanks. See: If you have any more questions, feel free to post a new question with more details and we can try to help you further. EDIT: Further information: The music editor is doing its best to provide a useful overview of the various soundbanks. It doesn't want you to spend any time selecting from the soundbanks. It's just providing you with a nice overview of the available sounds. For example, your vocal might be a high pitched female. This doesn't mean you can't record the high pitched female voice, you just might have to choose a different 'key' from the available keys. If you have more than one keyboard open you might not be able to choose a certain key and just play a tune on that key at the same time. Check out your 'Key' settings a bit more in the music editor: [Recurrence of Chagas' disease with the late manifestation of cardiac involvement]. He was followed-up for 30 years after the onset of the disease. In this period, although no cardiomyopathy was seen, he presented congestive heart failure and cardiomegaly. Echocardiography showed a marked enlargement of the left ventricle and an obstruction in the isthmus of the left coronary
