"We are maintaining the security of the Golan Heights and the area of the security barrier," Netanyahu said in a televised debate with the former foreign minister Tzipi Livni, who ran against Netanyahu in the January national elections. "We will not permit changes in the status quo of the Golan Heights," he said. The Obama administration has been trying for two decades to get Israel to commit to ending its occupation of the 1.2-square-mile (3.2-square-kilometer) plateau it seized from Syria in the 1967 war. Secretary of State John Kerry was expected to visit Israel and the Palestinian territories on Friday, but he pulled out of the trip. Kerry left the matter up to negotiators, and he said only that he would not miss a chance to visit the region to resume talks. Before Kerry's announcement, Netanyahu told the ministers of his coalition government that the United States had offered to "de-link" from the American troop presence in Syria what he said were the same forces that provide protection for the Israeli-controlled area. Netanyahu said: "We have not agreed to any such thing and the Golan Heights will not be handed over to anyone." Stopping short of accusing Kerry of interfering in the peace process, Netanyahu said that if Kerry had tried to make such an agreement, "he would have come as a spy for the Arabs," as the American presence in the Golan Heights was seen as a buffer against Syrian President Bashar Assad's use of chemical weapons. Livni said that though Israel, a nuclear power, could attack Iran if it thought it necessary, the use of chemical weapons was "more serious and dramatic than any American

It was written by long-time collaborative partners, Robert Krich and Steven Levitt, and directed by Peter Segal. The film features several homages to the 1957 Disney film The Absent-Minded Professor. The film is similar in some respects to the short-lived television series The Man From U.N.C.L.E. where the protagonists are hard working but socially awkward public servants. Plot The film opens with an introductory title slide (as opposed to a credit roll) where the museum's security chief, Alan Grunfeld (Ben Stiller), is shown in a security monitoring room, watching the video monitor. The night is a busy one, because the start of the holiday season is near, and a new exhibition is opening. The video camera catches the instant action of criminals breaking into the museum. At the museum, art conservator Lindsey Weber (Helena Bonham Carter) and her crew begin setting up for the exhibit, featuring props from the 19th century. The high-tech camera records a security guard (Shawn Johnson) being attacked by a thief (Mike Myers) in the security booth. Two security officers (Robert Downey Jr. and Ben Stiller) arrive in a chase car and witness the crime. With the police denied funding, 6d1f23a050
